SOMETHING IMPORTANT.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—The report ... to day to the effect that the Atchison had withdrawn from the Western Passenger association was premature. It has not withdrawn but has threatened to do so unless certain business is exempted from the rules and regulations of the association.

Salvation Army Congress.

—NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—As a fitting close of the Salvation Army congress which has been in session in this city during the week the visitors and thirty members of the Army of Peace determined to hold a demonstration in Association hall this evening. Before meeting hour the hall was crowded with men in red shirts and women in regulation army bonnets.

Commander Ballington Booth of the army in this country, accompanied by Mrs. Booth, arrived at 8 o'clock and took his seat as presiding chairman of the meeting. Surrounding him on the platform were Col. Wm. Evans of New York, Major Holtz of New York state, Maj. R. Evans of the Central division, Maj. Edward Stewall of Ohio, Maj. W. J. Cozens of Michigan, Mrs. W. Brewer, commander of New England, Major Halpin of Washington state, Major French of Iowa, Maj. W. Sulby of Kansas, Major Fielding of Chicago, Captain Milsops of San Francisco, and Major Kyle of Philadelphia.

Commander Booth made the opening address, in which he dwelt on the gigantic strides made by the army in the lively period of its existence, as evinced in this country by the congress just closed.

Addresses were also delivered by several department commanders.

The Columbian Committee Discouraged.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—The Columbian passenger committee virtually gave up the ghost and went out of existence to-day. All attempts to get a full meeting of the members have failed and those that had put in an appearance regularly at the call of the chairman concluded to-day that it was but throwing away precious time for them longer to attempt to transact business. It was decided that no further meetings be held until Nov. 1, 1893, when the fair will be over, and it was ordered that the secretary's salary cease with the end of the present month.

The Canadian Pacific in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—It was currently reported in Chicago financial circles to-day that the real purchasers of the Lake Street Elevated railroad is the Canadian Pacific railway. It is well known that the Canadian Pacific has been for some years anxious to secure an independent entrance into Chicago, instead of being as it is now, a renter of trackway and other facilities for conducting its business, from the Wabash railway, and the opinion prevails that the Canadian Pacific has been behind the "L" road from its inception.

A Suit Between Counties.

DEL NORTE, Colo., Nov. 23.—Papers were served on Rio Grande county to-day by Saguache county notifying the former of a suit brought by the latter in the matter of the boundary line between the two counties. The decision of Judge Holbrook last spring gave to Rio Grande county certain territory extending in a wedge shape north to Cochetopa pass and including a part of Creede. The suit is brought to set aside that decision which is of considerable importance to Rio Grande county which gains thereby about one-third more territory and much taxable property.

Government Silver Purchases.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The treasury department today purchased 274,000 ounces of silver as follows: 90,000 ounces at $0.8545; 134,000 at $0.8550; 50,000 at $0.8558.

The offers were 399,000 ounces. The silver purchased for the month including to-day aggregate 4,299,000 ounces.

The government having purchased the amount of silver required by law for the month, no further offers will be considered until Friday, Dec. 2.

Camp News.

Special to THE GAZETTE.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 23.—The Comstock-Eldredge Mining company has been adversed in its application for its patent on the Roudebush, Ponte, Haywood and Eldredge lodes by the Golden Terry and Elk Horn claims. —These properties are situated on Carbonate hill.

Money for the Institute.

DENVER, Nov. 23.—Deputy state treasurer Wilson paid out $14,000 to-day on a warrant issued in favor of the Mute and Blind institute. This completes the appropriation in favor of this institution and is the first payment under the decision of the supreme court last Monday declaring the bounty law unconstitutional.

An Assignment in Pueblo.

PUEBLO, Nov. 23.—L. W. Smith, dealer in crockery ware, assigned to G. T. Wiley this morning for $20,000. The assets are more than enough to cover the liabilities. The tightness of the money market caused the failure.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—(For Colorado):—Snow flurries; slightly warmer, east; much colder by Friday morning, west; variable winds.

Blaine's Condition.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—There is no change in Mr. Blaine's condition. He is about the same as yesterday.

Mr. Frick Testifies.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 23. The United States ... consisting of Senators Faulkner of West Virginia and Congressmen of New Hampshire, arrived in this city from Chicago and an adjournment at the Hotel Duquesne where their investigation of the Pinkerton agency question was resumed. The committee went into session at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The first witness was Wm. Martin, late secretary of the Amalgamated association, who gave his present occupation as chief of the labor bureau of the Carnegie Steel company. He said he was in charge of the wages paid to the men's and, to and the different superintendents in settling great troubles. As to attempts of settling with strikes he thought the Amalgamated association's about as good as any, as they had only two big strikes, those of 1882 and the one just ended. He believed in arbitration, but is strongly opposed to compulsory arbitration as impracticable. The employment of non-union forces ought to be the last resort.

H. C. Frick was on the stand for over two hours, but much of his testimony was necessarily silent as with that given before the house committee. He said the company employed foreigners from necessity, but he preferred Americans when they could be had. He said the firm employed over 20,000 men in the different branches and about 45 per cent. were native Americans. "We base the maximum and minimum of wages upon the selling price of our products and pay every two weeks. We employ watchmen during a suspension of work from our idle employees, when possible. Our experience with sheriffs in Fayette, Westmoreland and Allegheny counties is that they cannot furnish protection. We have not employed armed men from this or any other state."

Mr. Frick then submitted a copy of his letter to Robert A. Pinkerton of New York, in which he said 300 guards would be needed to protect their property and workmen, but stating that it was desired that they be armed. Mr. Frick continued: "We took every precaution to prevent trouble, and this is why we conveyed the men to the works on boats so they could be landed on our own property. We have reduced wages occasionally and advanced them frequently. They are higher now and the hours are shorter than in 1890. We went to the Pinkerton agency because it was the only means of getting men on short notice.

"We have not been in the habit of employing private detectives, disguised as workmen, but we have done so as a means of protection. The whole trouble arises from the lack of enforcement of the laws. The officers should see that a man has a right to work and an employer's property protected. I do not think compulsory arbitration would work well. The wages range from $1.40 to $12, the average being about $3. The cost to the men in this strike in wages was about $1,000,000. As to the loss to the company, I could not answer."

Mr. Frick's testimony closed with the statement that there was no provision made for paying the sheriff's deputies and the company had to advance the funds for this purpose. The investigation will be resumed to-morrow.

Knights of Labor Convention.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Nov. 23.—This morning's Knights of Labor session was very interesting and a number of important resolutions were adopted. Among them was a resolution favoring the restriction of immigration to those who had funds sufficient to support themselves for one year and restricting the ballot to those who could read and write. The convention refused to adopt a resolution favoring the abolition of the national guard. A boycott on Armstrong & Co., of Pittsburg, cork manufacturers, was re-adopted. The proposition to abolish the tax on state bank issues was condemned and the convention reaffirmed its stand that money should be issued by the national government only. The general assembly placed itself on record as being opposed to closing the World's Fair on Sunday and left the sale of liquor on the grounds to the state. The general executive board was authorized to take steps to establish a homestead building and loan association and establish an insurance association to provide members funds to carry on suits under the employers liability acts. After expressing thanks to the press associations and local press for favors, the convention at 12:30 adjourned sine die.

A Rioter Acquitted.

PITTSBURG, PA., Nov. 23.—The trial of Sylvester Critchlow, charged with murder in connection with the Homestead riot, was brought to a close this evening by the jury bringing in a verdict of acquittal.

When court convened to-day argument by counsel was resumed. Judge Kennedy began his charge at 2:35 p. m. Referring to the riot, the judge said: "If the jury is satisfied that the defendant took part in the riot of July 6, which resulted in the death of T. J. Connor, and that it was the common intent of such rioters to prevent the landing of these men on the barges to the extent of taking life, then he is guilty of murder in the first degree, as are all who took part in such riot. If you believe these rioters met for a common purpose, to resist the landing but not to the extent of taking life, then a verdict of murder in the second degree could be rendered."

When the judge closed, the jury retired and, after deliberating for two and a half hours, they, at 6 p. m., brought in a verdict of acquittal.

Mr. Critchlow, however, will be held on the charge of riot. He will probably be released on bail to-morrow.

In Jail with Friends.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 23.—According to statistics just made public there are 900,000 prisoners imprisoned in 159 jails in Russia. Ninety per cent. of the prisoners are men. The prisons were built to hold only 500,000 persons and an idea of their crowded condition can be obtained.

Many Meteors.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Nov. 23.—About 9 o'clock this evening the people of this city who were out were so fortunate as to see a grand shower of meteors and the sight will not soon be forgotten as it lasted nearly an hour. The sky being quite clear, the phenomena was visible the whole time.

A Fatal Fall.

DENVER, Nov. 23.—E. S. Edwards, a horticulturist living near here, fell from the third story of the Arapahoe building to the ground floor this afternoon and was so badly injured that he died shortly after midnight.

SOME MEXICAN NEWS.

Late Events of Importance in a Sister Republic.

GRAIN DUTIES REIMPOSED

The Announcement Causes a Rush of Importations. The International Will be Extended to Monterey.

Famine Ended.

...ERO, Mexico, Nov. 23.—A special says: ... there is no doubt that the Mexican Interoceanic railway system is to be ... to the ... Engineers are now in the ... making the survey of the proposed line from Tepitongo to Monterey.

C. P. Huntington, president of the Southern Pacific of Mexico, has renewed his company, for some time been contemplating building an independent line to Monterey, and on his recent visit to Mexico he made a thorough investigation into the feasibility and advisability of the project, with the result that he decided to undertake the work without further delay. It is believed here that the line will be extended to Tampico.

President Diaz made the official announcement to-day that the Mexican government will restore the import duty on grain Dec. 1, and orders to this effect were immediately given to the railway lines in the United States and shippers who have corn now en route rushed across the border before the duty becomes effective.

Advices received here from Nuevo Laredo and Piedras Negras state that there has been a great rush of grain shipments into the republic through those ports during the last few days and another serious blockade is threatened on the Mexican National and Mexican Central.

Reliable estimates place the amount of corn imported from the United States into Mexico during the temporary suspension of duty at 4,000,000 bushels. Several hundred thousand bushels of grain have come to this city where it has been distributed among the suffering people by the benevolent societies. A large amount of grain was also sold to the poor of Durango, Morlia and Zacatecas at cost prices. There is still severe suffering among the several thousand poor people of Zacatecas, but it is believed that the crop of corn and beans which are now being harvested in the south part of Mexico will be sufficient to relieve those in actual distress, until the next crop arrives.

New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Money closed at 4 per cent. The highest rate was 4½ and the lowest 4 per cent.

Trading during the morning hours on the stock exchange was on a little larger scale than during the same hours of yesterday. The dealings, however, were confined to about half a dozen speculatives, notably Wheeling and Lake Erie, Sugar Trust, Reading, Rock Island, Consolidated Gas, Erie, Northern Pacific preferred, and Whisky Trust. The tone of speculation was weak from the opening until noon when prices were down about ½ to 1 per cent. from the closing of yesterday. The decline was due to a slight selling on the part of some of the room traders operating on the bear side of the market. The fact of a holiday occurring to-morrow also had some effect in bringing stock on the market. The sales to midday amounted to 118,983 shares.

Trading was a little more active during the afternoon, but prices continued weak and on an advance in the rates of exchange of ½c to 4.86@4.86½, which is within half a cent of last summer's gold export level. There was considerable selling, and those who manifested an inclination in the early trading to support the market became more timid. The bears took advantage of the situation to hammer the list and on every appearance of a rally they resorted to this means to keep the market on the decline. There was however nothing extensive in the trading at any time. Sugar Trust was sold to a considerable extent at times to-day and closed 1 per cent. lower. The belief is general that this decline was engineered for the purpose of shaking out the weak holders. More than half of the total trading to-day was in the industrials and for most part of the day this group led the weaknesses. The manipulators of the securities were positive in their assertion that the declines were countenanced by themselves. With regard to the probable export of gold under the advanced rates of exchange foreign bankers were divided in their opinions. One of the largest foreign houses said that the matter was uncertain. If there should be a large accumulation of bills over Thursday to meet Friday's demand for remittances by Saturday's steamers no gold would go, but unless there is such an accumulation of bills it is thought gold will be shipped. This shipment, in any case, is not expected to exceed $2,000,000. The stock market closed devoid of any feature of interest and the closing figures were about the lowest of the day. The decline ranged from ½ to 1½ per cent. The sales of the day amounted to 254,460 shares.

Parental Injustice.

No worse preface to the story of a human life can be devised than the fixed conviction in a child's mind that he is of no special consequence in the world. The parent who seeks to inculcate wholesome humility by drilling this persuasion into young hearts and hearts harms his offspring beyond hope of reparation. Every boy and girl has a right to have and to hold, in full consciousness of its value, the title deed to the father's and mother's affections. The child should comprehend, as soon as he can lisp the evening prayer, that the love, the compassion, the never sleeping interest of his earthly guardians, are of a like type with that which warrant him in saying, "Our Father who art in heaven."

I favor greatly the hackneyed phrase—albeit often spoken lightly—"His father's (or his mother's) heart is bound up in that child." If I knew a word that would intensify the idea of the inseparableness of parental devotion from its object that would convey to our children how our souls and lives are knit, welded and fused into theirs, I would use it here to make impregnable the position that each immortal creature committed to our keeping must have an equal copartnership in us and in what we have to give. No man or woman should have the faintest shadow of justification for the murmur: "My parents never gave me the chance in life that was granted to my brothers and sisters. I was the odd one at home." It ought to be as impossible for human love to demit upon the fourth as upon the first baby.—Marion Harland in Harper's Bazar.

"The Week" and "Table Talk."

It is worthy of note, as an evidence of the diversion of value in the wants which the post brings to market, that the first two numbers of the "Irish Melodies" were sold for fifty pounds each, while so rapidly did they bring their author into fame that Mr. Power, the publisher, paid Mr. Moore for many years £300 per annum for the exclusive right of publication of the "Melodies." Nor is it uninteresting as per contra in balancing merits and reward to mark the amount (£3,000) paid for "Lalla Rookh," in which the liberal conduct of the Messrs. Longman in acceding to the price without seeing a line of the poem, the most pleasing or remarkable feature of the transaction.

The honorable generosity of Moore himself in offering to Messrs. Longman to reconsider the terms of this agreement brought to this offer of Moore's Longman's reply, which is worthy of quotation. "We shall be most happy in the pleasure of serving you in February. We are sorry you indeed that the times are most unpropitious for poetry and thousands, but we believe that your poetry would do more than that of any other living poet at the present moment. The records of such passages of life are delightful and enlivening. How they dash to the ground the cynic bitterness that would attribute all the movements of human action to mere selfish worldliness."—Westminster Review.

Sport for the Weary Party.

Among the explorers, and among the members of the relief expedition as well, the principal sport lay in the hunting of the walrus—a pastime that was dangerous as it was fascinating. The walrus is as plucky and full of fight when disturbed as the wildest tiger, and when a little band of hunters started out in their little whaleboat for such big game they were never positive of returning alive. In Rensselaer bay a party from the relief expedition embarked with an Eskimo harpooner one day on a hunt for walrus, and they returned a badly scared as men well could be. They fired into a herd of thirty walrus and killed one, when instantly the whole herd, with other herds that seemed to spring up like magic from all sides, charged fiercely at the boat.

The hideous brutes lashed the water into enormous waves, and, while the hunters fired charges from their Winchesters into them by the hundreds, made every effort to wreck the boat. One huge cow caught an oar between her teeth and snapped it like a reed, while another got her head and shoulders over the side of the boat, which dipped a volume of water and narrowly escaped capsizing. For fully an hour the fight continued hotly. Twenty walrus were killed. The water all about was dyed with blood, and the men were victors.—Philadelphia Record.

Caught in His Own Trap.

Something akin to the case of the engineer hoist with his own petard has happened to a citizen who dwells in the Rue Blomet. This person, who is evidently a man of much foresight and precaution, had hit upon a very ingenious system for the discomfiture of the enterprising burglar. He fixed up behind his door a revolver loaded with pellets, and so arranged as to act as a small battery, which would be fatal, or nearly so, to any one opening the door with undue pressure or bursting it in suddenly.

The citizen had a specially careful way of opening the door, but unluckily for himself he had dined too well, and the consequences may be guessed. He worked his latchkey all right and was entering his rooms rather energetically, when the temporarily forgotten battery set to work and its inventor received a full charge of pellets in the body. Although his injuries were slight, it is not probable, considering his experience, that he will retain the battery as a permanent institution.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

The Empirical Treatment of Disease.

One can easily understand how such remedies as weasels' gizzards, does' hoofs, snails, etc., have gained their favorable reception among ignorant persons. Used first in all likelihood in some case of illness mistaken for an incurable disease, the medicine has been followed by spontaneous healing, and has carried the stolen credit and the faith which go with reputation to other sick bedsides, sometimes with less spurious results. It cannot be doubted that some faith in confidence in the barrows of empiricism lingers among our own poor population, especially in country districts. In view of this fact the practice adopted by local vestries of inculcating active sanitary measures as the true preventive of sickness, and impressing the necessity of obtaining prompt medical and expert advice be too highly commended.—London Lancet.

The Sign Language.

It is evident that with the aid of a means of communication having the scope of the sign language, and learned without effort by simple intercommunication of deaf mutes, general knowledge may be rapidly instilled into the minds of those who are deprived of hearing. They improve remarkably fast; but this system is not without its drawbacks, for if the sign language is depended upon too greatly the pupil does not make that progress in the English language that is essential to his communication with hearing and speaking people, nor for his improvement by the reading of both textbooks and current literature.—Scribner's.

Albino Birds.

An extraordinary collection of birds is kept at the residence of Mr. W. Ingram, M. P., at Westgate, living happily in every variety of condition; in confinement in very large cages, in spacious voleries, in the walled in pleasance, and lastly, with perfect liberty and unclipped wings. There is one class of birds in which Mr. Ingram is particularly rich—he has ten albinos—viz., three white jackdaws, three white blackbirds, a white thrush, a white starling, a white hedge sparrow and a pure white variety of the herring gull, caught in the neighborhood.

One of the white jackdaws will go with the members of the family to the seashore and follow them about. What is even more wonderful, this affectionate bird is taken by Mr. Ingram in the autumn to Over Stilton, in Yorkshire, where she takes long walks with a member of the family, flying from tree to tree. Upon the whole, I deem this white jackdaw to be the most charming bird it was ever my good fortune to meet with. J. W. Weir in Nature Notes.

A Cyclone's Queer Work.

Nothing could withstand in places the terrible force of the wind on that fatal day of the 29th of April, 1892, on Mauritius. It will be for scientific men to explain how trees firmly planted more than a century back, and of eight to twelve feet diameter, were felled to the ground; how the ironlike teakwood branches were snapped and cut and broken as mere brushwood; how girders of iron eighteen inches thick were indented and twisted so as to become useless, as in the case of the great pulley ladders of a sea dredger; how, in fine, a column of stones, each weighing more than a ton and fastened with iron girders and with cement, was thrown down like a pack of cards, and it will be for meteorologists to explain how an island thirty-three miles by thirty-one in extent, through which the center of a cyclone is passing, can escape at all from a wind so violent as the above denotes.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Murder Does Not Always Out.

The old adage that "murder will out" is after all, more or less of a fiction. Scores of murders go unpunished every year throughout the civilized world, largely for lack of proof against the murderers. The resources of civilization are open to criminals as well as to officers. It is possible for a murderer to commit his crime and then be whirled hundreds of miles away before the deed is discovered. He knows just what methods will be used to secure his capture, and he may have planned how to outwit such attempts before they are made.

Murder is often and often usually discovered and punished, but there are many such crimes that have had no explanations, and it is possible that the Fall River tragedy may be one of these.—Boston Advertiser.

HETEROPHORALGIA

Or Headache from Eye Strain.

It is a fact now known and generally conceded by oculists and educated physicians, that certain so-called "eye diseases" of bygone years, as well as many cases of chronic headache, neuralgia, in children as well as adults, are due to a defective construction of the eyeball, or to an irregularity of one of its focusing powers. The deficiencies can only be discovered and remedied by a careful and thorough examination at the hands of a competent SPECIALIST.

H. A. RISLEY,
Manager of the Gazette.

The common impulse of humanity at the sight of any rapidly approaching object is to dodge. There is plenty of time afterwards to find out whether the object is dangerous or not. The latest example of the truth of this proposition is to be found in the comet which is reported as approaching the earth at a tremendous speed and with the chances somewhat in favor of a collision. A circumstance which adds somewhat to the alarm is that there is no known way of dodging. There is not the least use in going down cellar as in the case of a cyclone, or of getting behind a tree and even the resort of a dark closet with quilts over one's head which has worked satisfactorily in the case of a thunder storm seems quite out of place in presence of a body whose diameter is roughly calculated at some twenty five thousand miles. The momentary panic has also been somewhat augmented by certain self-styled scientists who have eagerly improved their opportunity to rush into print. Professor Muggins and Professor Blarney and Professor Jiggs have all expressed their views, and obtained a certain amount of free advertising. But the alarming opinions of these sensationalists need not be a subject of serious discomfort. Scientific opinion in regard to a cometary collision was settled some time ago and there is no reason for changing it in the present condition of affairs. In the first place a cometary collision is extremely improbable. In the second place if it did occur the chances are that no harm would result, and in the third place if the world should be destroyed, all the worrying beforehand would not prevent or lessen the catastrophe. Under the circumstances the first thing to do is to put full confidence in the opinion of those observers who claim that the comet is headed in another direction, and eat Thanksgiving dinner with clear consciences and good appetites.

The opening session of the international monetary conference proved that there are delegates other than those from the United States who are heartily in favor of the concurrent use of gold and silver as money metals upon equal terms, though at different standards. The opening speech by the Belgian premier was a review of monetary history wholly favorable to silver and a frank recognition of the circumstances which seem to demand an enlarged use of that metal. It is not probable however that any amount of this kind of reasoning will be sufficient to overcome the prejudice of England. That country seems to be firmly convinced that the silver agitation is no more than a political scheme on the part of Americans to provide a market for their product at an increased rate. It is useless to point out that England is equally selfish in insisting on a single standard. So long as England's commercial supremacy gives her the ability to dictate economic laws she will word them to her own advantage. But it is not impossible that a considerable amount of good may be done to the cause of bimetallism without the concurrence of England. The history and actions of the Latin Union point a way which may be followed by the United States and the other friends of the double standard without England's company. It may be that in this line the conference will be of considerable benefit, but even if it does no more than to awaken public interest and educate public sentiment, it will have accomplished much good.

Thanksgiving day comes once more to a world grown old in trouble and wrinkled with wrong, but a world which still finds each year something to be thankful for and something to be hopeful for. There is the common saying that however badly off we are we might be worse, and however little we have there is someone who has less. Yet such common sayings have the surest stamp of truth, and in their philosophy is to be found the most satisfying theory of life. The value of all things is estimated by comparison. It is not so much what we have as what we have gained that makes a reason for thanksgiving. For the ordinary blessings of life, such as food and shelter and companionship and a measure of health it is a poor sort of a man who does not feel grateful at all seasons, and the special time of thanksgiving can only be rightly appreciated if it is made the occasion for counting advancement. Thanksgiving day is a measuring day. He who in the past twelvemonth has gained a broader insight a clearer sense of duty, a broader and more kindly charity is the one who can observe his thanksgiving most highly and most satisfactorily. But if no more appreciation of it is possible than the purely material one, if it is only for prosperity individual and national that one can rejoice, even in so limited a sense Thanksgiving is a good thing and the material enjoyment of it by turkey is something to be commended rather than condemned.

Some important resolutions were passed yesterday at the national convention of the Knights of Labor which show how much that body is misrepresented not more by its enemies than by its pretended friends. Among the resolutions were one against the proposition to abolish the tax on state bank notes, one condemning the proposition to do away with the national guard, a resolution favoring the restriction of immigration and an educational restriction of the suffrage, and one opposing the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday and the sale of liquor on the grounds. It would be a good thing if the platform committee of one of the great political parties were endowed with as much clear headedness and right thinking as the Knights of Labor have shown in these actions.

Unusual pains are being taken to make the entertainment at the opera house this evening a success, and we have no doubt that this object will be accomplished and that it will be the best thing of the kind ever produced in this city. The fact that the proceeds are to be devoted to the free kindergartens is an additional reason why it should be well patronized.

It is reported that Senator David B. Hill is ready to resign his position as senator. He undoubtedly feels more at home in manipulating politics in New York than he does in assisting in legislation in Washington. There is something not altogether unworthy of admiration in the man who has sense enough to know when he is not a statesman.

She Got the Place

A young woman of the Literary Digest prompted by the desire to be useful supposed she could find employment in one of the Chicago dailies. She knocked at the door of the editorial office. All the places were filled, she was told, by years of experience. Undaunted by a blast from the chilly breath of the city editor she went from door to door, persevering until success crowned her efforts. Of course all the places were already filled, but finally when she had to advertise for the end of her means, she found a most desirable place for a will in blank voice required the object of her call.

"I don't want any current upon your paper or else cut."

"I don't think I understand you, sir," said the gentleman pleasantly, "but I think you could do the work if you understand the requirements of an editorial paper. We are specialists and I think we do not usually inform themselves upon our business."

"I don't know about that sir, but I feel that I can write upon almost any subject. Although young, I have had considerable experience."

"Doubtless miss but you see ours is a—a—a hog paper."

"Well sir," she spoke up brave, "it is quite true that I haven't read very much about those very interesting animals, but I have an uncle who has reared quite a number of them and I guess he could post me for the position."

She got the place and a good one. Such persevering always wins.—Chicago Mail.

Did His Duty

An old gentleman on the Rochester and Pittsburg railroad anxiously inquired of the conductor whether the train stopped at a little crossroad town on the line. It did not and the old man seemed very much disturbed in consequence.

"What am I going to do?" he asked mournfully.

"Did you want to get off there?" a sympathetic passenger inquired.

"No, but you see I've got a box of clothes pins that I wanted to leave off there for my darter."

"Why, you can drop them off the rear platform," said some one; and as they approached the little town four or five people followed the old man out on the rear platform of the train where he descended to the lower step and as the train sped past a shanty he leaned forward until the alarmed conductor grabbed his coat tails. The box struck the end of a log, and a couple of gross of clothes pins shot into the air as though fired out of a gun and scattered like shot from the muzzle of a bell pointed blunderbuss.

For a moment the old man was a picture of perplexity, but when he looked back up the track and saw his darter and grandchildren had witnessed the mishap and were hurrying out with the evident intention of picking up the scattered merchandise he turned and entered the car and glancing with an amused expression at the laughing passengers he said as he took his seat: "Well I'm glad them pins are delivered."—Harper's Young People.

One of Moore's "Bulls"

Sitting after dinner one evening at Sloperton cottage the conversation turned on the Irish aptitude to "bulls."

"By the way Mr Moore," said a young Englishman, "I've found you out in an Irish bull."

"Indeed," and the guilty poet, "pray what is it?"

"Oh," said young Literal, "in that song of The Watchman you say in the last verse:

'And see the sky—its morning—
No now indeed good night'

Now of course 'good night' in the morning is a blunder."

"Upon my word," said an old gentleman, "I never observed that bull before."

"Nor I either," said Moore gravely.

To do justice to both parties we shall give the verse of the song in question:

Again that fearful warning
Had ever time such flight
And see the sky—its morning—
No now indeed good night

The watchman having himself bawled out: "Past 12. 'Past 1.' 'Past 2.' at length calls 'Past 8,' and the startled lover sings the above. Good night!"—Westminster Review.

Giving Alms.

On a recent morning while a number of men were seated near the front door in a Broadway wholesale dry goods store an old but neatly dressed German woman entered. She carried an open basket containing boxes of wax matches. She looked deserving and honest and one of the men bought a box from her. While she was making change the door opened and a ragged beggar entered. He looked dirty and dissipated. He appealed to each man separately but in vain. As he turned to go out the woman stopped him took a cent out of her basket and handed it to him. He took it readily enough and passed on. She calmly picked up her basket and followed leaving the men to regard each other in wonder.

"Is that a put up job?" asked one.

He jumped up and locked out of the door. He could see the beggar coming out of a store a few doors above. The woman was going down Broadway.—New York Sun.

A Milk White Lake

Herr Thoroddsen announces that he has found a very long lake stretching from the margin of the mighty glacier which forms the western side of the Vatna Jokull in Iceland. It is milk white from the glacier water of which it is supposed to have been named the Langisjor. The scenery around it is described as very beautiful though the discoverer adds that vegetation is quite absent.

On the other side of the chain which terminates the lake in the south there is an extensive plateau on which was seen the glitter of a large water course probably the Skapta and far to the south some great lava stream dating probably from the last eruption.—Chicago Tribune.

An Explanation

In the year 88 the aurora borealis was seen one night as far south as Wiltshire. The tribal [illegible] of a Indian village assembled to witness the unwonted spectacle. Many were the inquiries as to what it was. Then a wise old man exclaimed: "Do the sick [illegible] Look to see if all the children be home. Make sure that no one is missing." When lo! the next morning the sick had died and the children had been stolen.—Notes and Queries.

Experiments with Bearings

Experiments have been made in England to determine definitely the friction of journal bearings and with the special apparatus employed in this inquiry the results show that with careful lubrication steel shafts running in gun metal bearings at from fifty to 400 revolutions per minute would stand with the following loads: Cast iron bearing 320 pounds per square inch; steel bearings 300 pounds per square inch; cylindrical bearings 400 pounds per square inch; [illegible] working interior [illegible] per square inch. In all these experiments the surface was taken as being the diameter by the length. It appears that in the friction of solids it is directly proportionate to the load while with liquid friction—that is with a perfect lubrication where a film of liquid intervenes between the metallic surfaces—the friction is independent of load.

Again, these experiments showed that in bearing with the load applied above, as in rolling stock, there was an upward pressure of more than 500 pounds, a hole being bored in the crown of the journal and a pressure gauge inserted showing as much as 600 pounds pressure per square inch in a bearing four inches in diameter by six inches long, a total pressure of upward of [illegible] tons being thus supported by fluid pressure of the lubricant.—Safety Valve.

Cyclone in Mauritius

At 8 p m on April 30 1892 the Island of Mauritius had lost its beauty the aloes its promise the planter his hopes and the gardens their charms. A short twenty four hours had sufficed to perpetrate the sad and fortunate had it been all this. But have stopped there for the sufferings can be affected by a simple and the soil of Mauritius is proverbially fertile and recuperative but 1000 people had been killed 5000 had been wounded one third of the capital had been levelled to the ground and thirty out of fifty churches and chapels had been demolished or converted as less sugar mills had been wrecked crushing mercilessly men women and children who had sought refuge under their solid walls every building had been blown away which stood in its way some 20,000 homeless people were left to seek for shelter and food which a few hours before they were quietly enjoying through their own exertions and labor.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Drowning Sensations

As there is considerable discussion in regard to death by drowning I offer my experience. I used to go swimming with the other boys but could never learn to swim well. Then one day when playing on some logs that were quite a distance from shore I fell off and came near drowning. I struggled desperately of course and tried to swim but could not and was sinking for the third time when I was rescued. Just before I had given myself up for lost everything I ever thought or did seemed to pass with lightning speed before me and it was as though I could separate the evil things from the good ones of my past life. The sensation was torturing rather than pleasant. I can assure you. My brother who witnessed my struggling could never forget the utterly despairing expression of my face.—Alexander Macauley in New York Sun.

What Carlyle Wrote of Tennyson.

Tennyson in his prime was thus described by Thomas Carlyle to Ralph Waldo Emerson on Aug 5, 1844: One of the finest looking men in the world. A great shock of rough dusty dark hair bright laughing hazel eyes, massive aquiline face—most massive yet most delicate, of sallow brown complexion, almost Indian looking clothes cynically loose free and easy, smokes infinite tobacco. His voice is musically metallic, fit for loud laughter and piercing wail and all that may lie between: speech and speculation free and plenteous. I do not meet in these late decades such company over a pipe.—New York Tribune.

When the Cat Was Sacred.

In the Middle Ages brute animals formed as prominent a part in the devotional ceremonies of the time as they had in the old religion of Egypt. The cat Ghurus, was embalmed after death and buried in the city of Bubastis, because, according to Herodotus, Diana Bubastis, the chief deity of the place was said to have transformed herself into a cat when the gods fled into Egypt.

Hard to Understand

Little Boy—I shu'd think these 'thousand leg' bugs would starve or somethin.

Little Girl—Why?

"They've got to hunt for things to eat same as other bugs haven't they?"

"Of course."

"Well, I don't see how they can keep all those legs goin an think of anything else."—Good News.

The Century Magazine

It would be hard for a person who is a good reading to make a better investment for a year's subscription to The Century Magazine. The question is too large to be discussed here, but if it will only produce what the readers want. This is the policy that has made it, as the Pall Mall Budget of London says, "By far the most [illegible] American."

The November number begins a new year and contains the first chapters of a new novel of New York society called "Out of Tune" written by Mrs Burton Harrison, the author of "The Anglo-Saxon." This story, the fashionable setting of which is the parlors of the boxes in the Metropolitan Opera House, the smart set in the city, are faithfully reflected and the drawings by Charles Dana Gibson. Life's well known contributor are as brilliant as the novel.

In this November number begins a new series of papers on "The Bible and Its Critics" by Professor Shields, of Princeton, who takes the ground that the Bible does not contain scientific errors of [illegible] and who most [illegible] completely states the case from his point of view. Other papers in this series will include one in December (Christmas number) on "The Scientific Study upon Religious Beliefs."

An important series of articles that will run through General Sherman and his biographer John Sherman is to be begun in the November number, which number contains also contributions from the most distinguished writers, including an article by James Russell Lowell which was not quite completed at the time of his death. The suggestion which Bishop Potter made in the November Century as to what could be done with the World's Fair if it should be opened on Sunday is one which closes the practical solution of the problem with which it deals.

The December Century is to be a Christmas number. It will contain the first chapters of a series of papers on the life in Colorado by Professor Frederic Ellis Bates of Colorado Springs, who wrote "The Valley Road" and "Rudyard Kipling."

Papers on good roads is the new [illegible] methods and results.

Four dollars will be sent you [illegible] a year's subscription to The Century Magazine for one year and all orders received before the end of November will be entitled to the November numbers free. Address The Century Co. 33 East 17th st. New York. They should begin with November. Best chapters of all the serials, including "Out of Tune."

AFTER FIFTY YEARS.

A Woman's Chance Receipt of Tidings of Her Kin in Kamchatka.

More than half a century ago William Tolman sailed on a whaling ship bound for the northern seas. The ship was disabled and put into Kamchatka for repairs. Mr. Tolman was a master mechanic, and so well pleased were the inhabitants with his work of repairing the disabled ship that the authorities of the place induced him to stay. A few years after he married a Russian girl, by whom he had a daughter and two sons. When the daughter was eleven years old her father sent her to America on a whaler in charge of the captain. The ship put into the port of New London, Conn., and the captain sent word to the girl's relatives in western New York, who came to New London by team and took her to their home. Afterward she, with relatives, came to Michigan.

The girl grew to womanhood, married an Episcopal clergyman named Dunn, and settled down in Lawrence, Kan. For fifty years Mrs. Dunn never heard a word from her parents in faraway Kamchatka. One day about a year ago she chanced to speak to a Russian in the streets of Lawrence, and was surprised when the subject of the czar said he once knew William Tolman, her father, and two brothers. He said that Mr. Tolman was dead, but that the sons were alive, but very poor. One of them, he told her, was a trapper.

The Russian gave Mrs. Dunn their address and she wrote to them, sending them clothing and many useful presents. In due time she got a letter from one brother, the first for over fifty years. The letter was passed around among the relatives. Yesterday W. T. Hess, of this city, got a letter, written in Russian, from one of the Tolman brothers in Kamchatka. Not being a Russian scholar he went out of his store to find some one to translate it. He espied a street fakir, and he asked him if he could read the letter. The fakir looked at it and replied, "Yes, sir; it is Russian and from Kamchatka." He translated the letter for Mr. Hess.

"Here is the funny part of the whole thing," said Mr. Hess. "Mrs. Dunn learned of her relatives through a Russian on the street in Lawrence, Kan., and I had one of her brother's letters translated by a Russian found on the street in Grand Rapids. The William Tolman who sailed on the whaler was my uncle, for whom I was named. Funny how we get news from relatives sometimes," continued Mr. Hess.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

Her Only Thought.

It was one of the days when the wind blows suddenly and sharply around the corners, when the dust whirls in clouds and the air has a hard, cold dampness which goes straight through any coat except a fur one. Away up town on one of the western avenues, where cheap shops are kept on the ground floor of cheap flat houses a woman stood by a window with a baby in her arms. Her dress was shabby and so thin that the wind went through it as through a sieve. The baby had a woolen frock and a worsted coat and cap, and seemed to be warm enough as he narrowed upon the woman's shoulder and dug his spread ing little fingers into her eyes.

In the shop window were displayed two kinds of garments. On one side were women's woolen petticoats and all kinds of heavy cotton underclothing, which looked warm and comfortable. But this woman did not see them, for she was looking on the other side of the window, where were shown little knitted hoods and tippets of white, fleecy stuff, and babies' mittens and babies' shoes and babies' fancy caps, with ribbons in them.—New York Times.

Large Electric Locomotives.

The most powerful electric locomotives yet used are two of the London Underground railway. Each locomotive, according to a description of Mr. Alexander Siemens, carries two motors, and the use of all gearing is obviated by winding the armatures of the motors on the axles of the locomotive wheels. Tests of the four motors before they were fitted to their places gave from

The Mixed Race of India.

Eurasia has no boundaries. It lies, a [illegible] India, thick in the [illegible] in Calcutta, where [illegible] and where [illegible] are most numerous. Wherever Europeans have [illegible] there is some of them there [illegible] who have received [illegible] of the feeble inheritance of their blood that makes it possible for them to live and die in India. Nothing will ever exterminate Eurasia, it clings to the sun and the soil, and is marvelously adaptative within its borders.—Sara J. Duncan in Popular Science Monthly.

A CLEAR CASE.

It has been proven beyond all question of a doubt that Oregon Kidney Tea will cure all cases kidney and urinary troubles, pains in the back, diabetes, inflammation of the bladder, nervousness and all complaints arising from a diseased or debilitated state of the kidneys or urinary organs of either sex.

The drinking of alkali or impure water will in time weaken and derange the urinary organs of the strongest constitutions, bringing on a diseased condition that may in time prove disastrous, but this evil effect of bad water or change of climate may be counteracted by the use of Oregon Kidney Tea. It is pleasant to take, and a trial will convince you of its merits. Call and get a sample package, free. For sale by F. E. ROBINSON.

Cleopatra stock is quoted in the market here at 15½ cents and on the mining exchange, Denver, at 20 cents There are only a few shares on the market here and some of the holders who project to hang on are talking of cleaning it up and getting it off the lists. A gentleman in this city wrote to Mr Crawford, manager of the Last Chance mine for advice in buying the Cleopatra stock, and yesterday received a reply Mr Crawford says the stock will be worth a dollar a share as soon as the first shipment is made, which will be in about thirty days The manager of the mine say that the Cleopatra has a vein about six feet between the walls, and the vein matter is mineralized all the way through For some time, however, only a foot in the hanging wall has yielded rich enough to make it valuable Lately another rich streak has appeared along the foot wall. As depth is reached the two rich streaks are coming together and as soon as it is thought advisable a shipment will be made The management say that they do not propose to ship until they can send out a valuable lot of ore It is also stated that the Cleopatra will have at least 1000 feet of the vein The impression has gained ground that they have only a few feet, and this, they say grows out of the fact that their shaft is in the southwest corner of the New Discovery claim The vein however, dips toward the Cleopatra claim and the apex is not over 100 feet from the west line of the Cleopatra claim.

The Antlers Park Regent people were in high feather yesterday over the news from their Creede properties A letter was received from Mr O P Poole, who is doing the contract work for them, in which he states his belief that the company has struck the Amethist vein. His work has been delayed on account of water, and the lack of a steam hoist The latter has been ordered and Mr Poole states that he hopes to make the property a shipper in the next ninety days. He gives details of the placing of the armed guards about the property which created so much excitement during the week and says that it was necessary to protect the company's interests. A dispatch to the Denver Times last evening stated that Moran had left the Park Regent property and gone back to work on the Moran shaft which is taken as evidence that he has given up his contest with the Park Regent Dr G W Lawrence treasurer of the company, is now at Creede inspecting the property
